

Companies that provide mental health benefits
have more 'open minded'
workers towards mental health?

Beatriz Renault - fev 2020

OPENESS TOWARDS METAL HEALTH ISSUES

at companies with known mental health benefits, people are slightly more open to talk about it with their supervisors (green bar) and expect less negative consequences by doing it.

Q1.: Does your employer provide mental health benefits? y/n qA.Would you be willing to discuss a mental health issue with your coworkers? Yes=3, Maybe=2, No=1. qB.Would you be willing to discuss a mental health issue with your direct supervisor(s)? Yes=3, Maybe=2, No=1. qC.Do you think that discussing a mental health issues with your employer would have negative consequences? Yes=3, Maybe=2, No=1.

by splitting the companies in tech and non tech, it is possible to see that tech companies (even the ones without known mental health benefits) have more 'open minded' employees towards the subject.

please check the file
Tech Mental Health - Beatriz
for mor details about data cleaning, sample sizes and correlations.